MUST REGISTER IF YOU WANT TO VOTE

County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese reports that registration throughout the county is progressing in a more orderly manner this year than ever before. A larger force is at work than in previous years, and specific precincts have been assigned to each of the deputies in the various cities. In this way a very complete canvass is being made, and the registration total for the coming elections should be greater than ever before.

Mrs. Kneese says San Mateo county should have at least 35,000 voters on the register this year. In 1926 the figure was 24,009, and in 1928 it increased to 30,159.

Mrs. Kneese is doing everything possible to get every voter on the register, and asks the co-operation of the public in this work. The questions asked by the registration deputies are really not difficult to answer. Yet many astonishing reports are sent in by various field deputies. Some say, "You ask too many questions;" "I'm too busy now;" "I'm not interested."

In former times, the voter had to seek the deputy. Now the deputy goes from house to house and all the voter is expected to do is to answer a few questions and then sign the affidavit.

The following have been appointed as registration deputies who will register voters in Daly City: Grace L. Augustien, 501 Evergreen avenue; Margaret Fahy, 613 Bellevue avenue; Teresa P. Falvey, 314 Hillside boulevard; May Hawkins, 139 Knowles avenue; Ella McKee, 79 Irvington street; Lilly Riddell, 633 Templeton avenue; B. C. Ross, City Clerk, City Hall; Ellis C. Johnson, Justice Court, City Hall; John J. Fahey, 6284 Mission street.

What you have to do to register for voting. Answer the following questions and sign your name to the affidavit when the deputy calls at your home.

Your name. (Women registering should give their own first name, i. e. Mrs. Mary Brown, not Mrs. John Brown.) Occupation. Street address. Party affiliation. Height. Nativity. If foreign born, how citizenship was acquired. If you were naturalized by decree of court, the date and place of naturalization is necessary. If you have not registered before in San Mateo county, it will be necessary to show your naturalization certificate to the deputy. If you have done this peviously, Mrs. Kneese will have the record in her office, and it will not be necessary to produce the certificate each time, but the deputy must enter the date and place of naturalization on your affidavit. If you have the information available, it will save your time and the deputy's as well.

Foreign born women, naturalized through marriage or through the naturalization of her husband.

Prior to September 22, 1922, the naturalization law provided that any foreign born woman marrying a citizen became a citizen by virtue of that marriage. It did not make any difference whether the husband was a native born or a naturalized citizen. If he was a citizen at the time of the marriage, the wife became one too. In such cases all that is needed is the date and place of marriage, and the husband's name.

The law prior to September 22, 1922, also provided that any woman whose husband became naturalized while she was married to him became a citizen at the same time. In such cases the deputy will ask for the date and place of naturalization of the husband, and the husband's name.

Another method of acquiring citizenship is by virtue of the father's naturalization. The father's naturalization naturalizes all the minor children. In this case all that the voter is required to give is the father's name.

There are a few other exceptional cases by which citizenship is acquired which will be explained by the deputy if the case requires.

HONORED GUEST AT PARTY ON TWELFTH BIRTHDAY

Miss Rose Kilby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Kilby, of Miriam street, was guest of honor last Saturday afternoon at a birthday party given in honor of her twelfth birthday. During the afternoon Rose favored her guests with several fancy dances and songs. Emma Jane Haskins also entertained with songs.

The young ladies spent a delightful afternoon playing games and dancing, after which dainty refreshments were served. The table was prettily decorated in pink crepe paper with little baskets to match. A huge birthday cake occupied the center of the table.

Those invited were Frances Winn, Iris Winn, Emma Jane Haskins, Cleo Prineas, Louise Kellinger, Leola Hutchings, Jean Sanderson, Fay Griszsby, Betty Morgan, Helen Anderson, Hazel Friend, Agnes Kosta, Betty Brown and Alice Le Kam.

ONE BY ONE TIME CUTS THEM DOWN

Again the relentless reaper has taken away a famous character of the county. This time it is John H. Hatch of Burlingame, known familiarly to all in the good old days as "Harry Hatch."

What a winsome figure he was! Almost six feet tall and built in proportion, with not an ounce of surplus flesh, straight as an arrow when standing and his well shapened head always at a dignified poise, his form was of perfect mold. No one could look upon his fair face and not notice his bold brow of intelligence, his sharp eyes that might see through any deception and his friendly set jaw that defied injustice of every description. Is it any wonder that he was once called the Adonis of the county?

The writer was fifteen when he noticed him first. Then he was a candidate for sheriff of the county, about twenty-eight years of age. He had been constable of Half Moon Bay before and had won a reputation for unhesitating, cool bravery. It was well known that no personal danger would cause him to deviate the slightest from what he considered the right course for him to pursue.

The people of his community knew him and were for him regardless of party, but other parts of the county questioned the wisdom of entrusting the chief executive office of the county to one so yuung. John C. Edgar, the incumbent, an elder and more experienced man, seemed to be preferred. He took advantage of the youthfulness of his opponent and spoke of him not complimentarily as "a boy."

During the campaign it happened that the two candidates met at the county half-way house, known as Byrnes's Store, the older glowing with the assurance of another victory, and the younger repressed and determined, yet feeling the taunt of being called "a boy." An unfriendly political talk was started by the older one, who seemed to misjudge the repression and the great strength of the younger. Perhaps it was his certainty of triumph or it might have been the stuff that makes men reckless; at any rate the older spoke contemptuously in reference to his boyish competitor. The boy could stand no more. He stepped up to his opponent and before any one knew what was going to take place, he had struck such a telling blow that a great man staggered through the open doorway and rolled down the front steps. The younger man, "the boy," said never a word, but went to his horse and buggy and drove away. There was no telephone or radio then, but like a flash the story of what "the boy" did reached every voter of the county and was not forgotten. On election day it still had its effect. The "boy" was elected sheriff and if ever a man graced an office he did.

Those were not easy days for any honest enforcer of the law. The law defying ones of San Francisco made this county their sporting location for dancing, drinking and gambling. Desperados, like Rafael Vidal of Half Moon Bay, dared to do almost anything that was not right.

The new sheriff had many opportunities to show his skill, honesty and bravery, and no matter how severe the test might be it was conceded that he was never found wanting.

Not long after his election the handsome young sheriff was married to the charming Miss Mary McPeake. Their marriage was a great social event, the talk of the county for some time. All agreed that they were well suited to each other, and every kind of hearty congratulation was extended to them. The bonnie bride, who was the acknowledged belle of the county, in her day, proved faithful and true to the end and lives to mourn the death of her beloved, with whom she celebrated Christmas forty-seven times, lovingly, all the other days, likewise. She was really his helpmate, overcoming every failure with sweet sympathy and making the successes worth while with her happy enthusiasm.

In the primitive days the term of the sheriff was two years. Harry Hatch was re-elected for a second term and served to the end, giving the people an excellent administration, noted for impartial justice in the enforcement of laws in every locality.

He was a candidate for a third term and after a hard campaign he was defeated by William H. Kinne, a dairyman of the north end. Vanquished in politics, he went out of office with very little capital remaining, but he had friends, one of whom was Nathan C. Carnall, a real estate genius, who often pictured San Mateo county, rich and populous, as it is today. From him perhaps he obtained the idea of buying lots in good locations in San Mateo and Burlingame.

To get the means necessary, he settled down to the hotel business in San

SCHOOL DIAMOND TO BE REVAMPED

Daly City in all probability will become one of the leading amateur baseball centers during the coming season. This statement is based on the fact that the Jefferson high school diamond is to be reconditioned soon and a grandstand erected.

The greatly needed improvements of the grounds consists of the backstop being moved to the northeast corner of the lot, and the infield leveled. The outfield will probably remain as it is.

Two local nines, the Daly City Merchants and the Jefferson All Stars, both had good teams last year, with enviable records. The Merchants won twenty-two out of twenty-nine games, and the All Stars were defeated five times in thirty-one starts.

Ed. Cavagnaro, manager of the Merchants, said: "The proposed plans if carried out properly will help advertise Daly City. We could have booked the best teams around here to play on our diamond last year, if it had been in any acceptable shape. I am sure the local fans will see some real contests this season, as the opposing nines will want to play here under the promised favorable conditions."

That seems to be the whole story in a nutshell. Daly City must have a good diamond to attract good, fast teams. Let's have them.

ENJOY WINTER SPORTS IN YOSEMITE VALLEY

On Saturday afternoon, January 18, a trip was made to Yosemite Valley by a party of friends from Daly City, Colma, and the Bay district. They motored to Mariposa, staying there for the night, and entered the valley early Sunday morning. The day was spent in winter sports, such as ice skating, tobogganing, and riding the ash can covers over the snow, with snowball fights during intermissions. Several of the party hiked to Muir Lake, which is now frozen, and the snow through the entire valley is not less than 21 inches in any place. The valley is now one of the most wonderful places to go to enjoy winter sports.

Among those in the party were Mrs. Mary Zipser, Miss Mary Zipser, and Richard Zipser, of Colma, Miss Lillah Brown, Garrett Colloty, George P. Marsh, Arthur M. Evensen of the Daly City Branch of the Bank of Italy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zipser, of Berkeley, with relatives of Mrs. Mary Zipser from Modesto, and several other friends from around the bay district. Miss Lillah Brown and Arthur M. Evensen were the guests of the Zipsers, of Colma, in Richard Zipser's new Dodge sedan. On the homeward journey the happy group made a stop in Modesto, where they enjoyed a delicious turkey dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Zipser.

Apply For Marriage License

Applications for marriage licenses were filed in San Francisco last Tuesday by Felipe Carrasco, of Vallejo street, San Francisco, and Theresa Lubt, of Daly City; and Jack J. Gotfried, of Daly City, and Anna Gold, of Pine street, San Francisco.

ODDS AND ENDS OF WEEK'S NEWS

Discussion of the water crisis in San Mateo county so engrossed the West San Mateo Improvement club at its meeting in the Borel school last Friday night that club members did not get around to the annual election of officers. President Niels Andersen was instructed to obtain further information on the water situation and to arrange to have speakers familiar with the subject at the meeting on February 7.

A Burlingame woman and her daughter and five South San Francisco people are recovering from injuries received when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on the Bayshore highway near Mills Field and collided with a steam roller last Friday.

Political controversies that have arisen in San Francisco over control of the newly acquired Spring Valley Water company may result in indefinite delay in San Mateo's plans for formation of a county water district.

More than $75,000, nearly half of the appropriation for operation of San Francisco's municipal airport, Mills Field, at San Bruno, is available for the balance of the fiscal year, according to a report submitted to E. J. Spaulding, new airport committee chairman. This is said to be sufficient for the airport until June 30.

Mrs. Augusta J. Dessin, mother of Fire Chief Wilkie J. Dessin of Burlingame, and well known pioneer of the city, died early last Saturday at the home of a daughter, Mrs. Edith D. Sembrach, in Burlingame. She had been ill for several months.

Nick Traller, Livermore, was killed and Miss Ella Hibbs, his companion, was seriously injured by a negro maniac on the Niles-Alvarado highway early Friday. Frank Witsell, alleged to be wanted in East Oakland on a child outrage charge, was arrested as a suspect.

Dr. H. S. Feix, chaplain of the California Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., died last Friday morning at his home in San Francisco after an illness of several days. Dr. Felix was pastor of the First Luthern church of San Francisco for the past 20 years and was the national chaplain of the United Indian War Veterans of America and National Chaplain of the Spanish War Veterans. He was 74 years of age and beloved throughout the state.

CALFORNIA INDIANS MAY FILE CLAIMS FOR LAND

Indians of California descent residing in San Mateo and Santa Clara counties and San Francisco, may file land claims against the U. S. government with Fred A. Baker, department of the interior examiner, in Room 114 of the State Building in San Francisco, Baker has announced. The enrollment started Monday. While in Redwood City, Baker enrolled 55 California Indians for the right to sue the United States for $12,800,000, representing the value of California lands taken from the Indians in 1851-52, but he believes many more have not yet enrolled.

"THE BOY JESUS" WILL BE PRESBYTERIAN THEME

At the Sunday evening service in Grace church the pastor will speak on "The Boy Jesus." This is the logical theme in the life of Jesus and will lead up through His life towards the great Easter goal of the Resurrection.

BREEDERS SECURE TANFORAN TRACK

The Pacific Coast Breeders Association has completed negotiations for the purchase of the Tanforan race track and announcement has been made that the property has been turned over by the Pacific Coast Jockey Club to the breeders. The organization of breeders has been active for some time in encouraging the production of pure bred stock of all kinds.

The Pacific Coast Jockey Club, which has disposed of the San Bruno holdings, was organized about eight years ago by the Fleishacker and Spreckels interests.

The Pacific Coast Breeders Association has in its membership many of the wealthiest and most influential breeders of live stock in the state. The officers of the association are: President, Louis Oneal; Secretary, Charles E. Jones; Directors, James H. Bishop, W. S. Tevis, Jr., Thomas E. Shumate, Thornwell Mullally, Charles E. Jones, Louis Oneal and W. B. Coffey.

Secretary Jones, as spokesman for the association, outlined its purposes and ambitions at length. He said:

"For some time the officers of our association have felt that something should be done to arouse the widest possible interest in the breeding industry of the state. We laid the matter before many of the leading breeders and owners of pure bred stock and the response was so prompt and encouraging that we became convinced the time was ripe for action.

"The Pacific Coast Breeders Association was oganized in 1926, not for profit. It holds a fifty year charter from the state.

"Our members were anxious that the association should have a home from which to carry on its activities, and Tanforan offered the most inviting proposition. We intend to work in harmony with the horse show organizations, the polo clubs, and with organizations of San Mateo, Contra Costa, Alameda and adjacent counties that may contemplate fairs or exhibitions of pure bred stock.

"The association will foster subsidiary organizations that are formed for putting on shows and meets of various kinds.

"We are particularly pleased with the interest shown by the harness horse men of the state in our project, and if a bay district fair is arranged the track will be given over to the trotters and pacers. In the event of racing, either of the standardbreds or of thoroughbreds, the sport will, at all times, be within the law.

"California has bred and is breeding thoroughbreds of high class and we shall do everything possible to increase the prestige of the state in this regard."

JEFFERSON IS DEFEATED BY PANTHER QUINTETS

Jefferson high school's basketball teams traveled to Burlingame Wednesday to receive a pair of trouncings. The unlimiteds lost by a 38-17 score, and the 130's were outclassed, 23-7.

Burlingame's unlimited team displayed an offense that will be hard to beat by any Peninsula high school quintet. Time and again the Panther forwards sank a set-up after a neat, fast breaking play had been executed. The score at half time was 16-6 in favor of the winners.

The 130's game was closely contested only during the first quarter. At that time Jefferson was leading 4 to 2. The Red and White basketeers took new life after that and attained a 11-4 lead at the intermisison.

Burlingame put in a fresh team at several stages of the games. This above all spelled defeat for the local boys. They could not be expected to give all they had all the time and battle on even terms. The Jefferson boys put up a good fight, considering this disadvantage, and should be commended for their spirit.

SPRING VALLEY IS NOW GAME REFUGE

Protection was being given to game and wild life over a vast area of San Mateo county last Monday morning, when the San Mateo county board of supervisors adopted a resolution declaring the properties of the Spring Vally Water Company a game refuge.

The resolution was drawn by District Attorney Franklin Swart, and passed on motion of Supervisor Thos. L. Hickey, seconded by Supervisor John Poole. A certified copy was sent to the San Francisco board of supervisors, urging similar adoption, since San Francisco is about to take over the Spring Valley company.

Game on the thousands of acres of the water company has been protected for years, and Monday's action furthers the protection of the fast-diminishing wild life of the county.

The resolution declares the wild life on the Spring Valley properties has "become the heritage of every man, woman and child of San Mateo county."

A stormy protest meeting over the proposed North Fair Oaks sanitary district, occupied the entire morning. Property owners in the district, which is intended to include part of Redwood City, part of Atherton and all of the land between those two cities, packed the supervisor's room to capacity.

Four petitions, containing a total of 145 names, protested installation of the sanitary sewers, while a fifth petition was thrown out by the board as having "nothing to do with the present argument."

Proteses were registered by two groups of citizens, the University Realty company, representing owners of acerage and Fred H. Sumers, property owner in the Dumbarton tract. The protests generally regarded the improvement as unnecessary and too costly. County Engineer George Kneese said the cost per 50-foot unit to the direct benefitters would be between $45 and $47. The total cost to property owners will be over a hundred thousand dollars.

The board, on motion of Supervisor Poole, finally adopted a resolution of continuance until February 17, which will give opponents and proponents a chance to thrash out their difficulties among themselves.

DISTRICT OFFICERS VISIT WOODROW WILSON P. T. A.

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. held their regular monthly meeting in the Woodrow Wilson kindergarten room last Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. C. Page presiding.

The association was happy to have several of the officers of the Seventeenth district present to help start the new year with some very interesting thoughts and helpful words.

Mrs. Baughn, first vice-president of the Seventeenth district, spoke on the working principles of the P. T. A., the welfare of the child and the partnership existing between the school and home through the P. T. A. Mrs. Gibbons, spiritual training chairman, gave a short talk on the spiritual training of our children, showing every one present that we must not neglect this important part of the children's education.

Mrs. D. Putney, of Daly City, publicity chairman of the Seventeenth district, was a very welcome visitor, and the association was sorry there was not more time to have a talk from all the visiting officers.

Prof. W. J. Savage, supervising principal of the schools of the Jefferson district, gave a few words about the close harmony between the P. T. A. and the schools, saying that he was very willing to do all in his power to help this very good work the P. T. A. is doing.

Mrs. Robison, lecturer from the Hostess Cake Company, gave a very interesting and helpful talk on "The Health of Our Children."

The officers and members of Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. were happy to have Mrs. L. Fletcher, president of General Pershing P. T. A., and Mrs. Ivy Alexander, president of Crocker P. T. A., among the visitors, and hope they will find time to visit us often. Also we are glad so many of our teachers responded to their special invitation to meet with the P. T. A.

After the close of the meeting all enjoyed coffee and cake, served in the sewing room, Mrs. G. Woodside and Mrs. Coffin acting as hostesses for the afternoon.

ANTHONY DRAWS $50 FINE

Manuel Anthony, of 701 Templeton avenue, who was arrested Thursday morning of last week by Officer Barney Hilton for molesting young ladies, on their way to work at 6:30 in the morning, and charged with disturbing the peace, was found guilty by Judge Ellis C. Johnson last Monday morning and fined $50, and given a thirty-day suspended sentence.

ONE BY ONE TIME CUTS THEM DOWN

Mateo. The Crystal Springs dam was being built. This enterprise employed many men for years, so the hotel business turned out to be quite profitable. People who remember Hatch's Hotel, also recall Harry sitting in a chair, on the porch, calmly smoking his meerchaum pipe, no doubt thinking of Carnall's prophecy, and deciding upon what piece of property he would try to buy next. He became tired of business and turned the hotel over to his brother, Charles Hatch. To pass the time away he accepted the public position of superintendent of the county farm, where he promptly brought order out of chaos by introducing and maintaining reasonable consideration among the inmates. Here he remained four years, ably assisted, as in the hotel, by his better half. The figuring on the lots and the prophecy was a part of every day's work.

When he retired from the county farm, he gave his whole time to real estate. Ere long it became both interesting and profitable, supplying him with ample returns for a comfortable living. Values increased constantly, and also the income.

The day came when he felt he could afford a trip to Europe for himself and his wife. He went and spent considerable time away. When he returned the advance in real estate more than compensated for what he had spent. The prophecy had become a reality. San Mateo and Burlingame were important cities and lots he had purchased for a few hundred dollars were worth many thousands. The figuring and the smoking had not been in vain. A generous income for life was assured.

This success made no change in the even tenor of his way. He continued the same thoughtful, quiet-speaking, friendly person he had always been, just as glad to meet a loyal friend as ever. He was accustomed to make a daily trip from his home in Burlingame to San Mateo and return. If he failed to do this, his friends knew that something was amiss with him.

He enjoyed his trip to Europe so much that he made four more and highly recommended such to all of his associates. Every time he returned he found himself better off. The real estate seemed to exult in advancing.

In politics he was a Democrat, and proud of it. As such he won victories and learned full well the meaning of gloomy defeat, but his inherent loyalty prompted him to accept the result, whatever it chanced to be, without a word of regret. He was glad to help in any campaign with his advice and financial aid, during his recent years. He kept his political word himself, and expected his associates to do the same. When a few of them failed in this respect, he never forgot and let each of them know in a very positive way, when it stung, just a trifle. This was his way to emphasize the need of honor.

The many laws of the last score of years, designed to make men better by limiting their personal inclinations, were decidedly repugnant to him. Expressing his feelings on this point he said, "I am glad I spent part of my life when I was free to do as I pleased."

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hatch, early residents of Half Moon Bay. His birthplace was Canada, and he came, as a child, with his parents, to this state. His father ran a flour mill that obtained its power from a great water-wheel which was the wonder of the boys of Half Moon Bay, fifty-five years ago. Around that mill, at the village school, rambling over the coast hills and valleys, he spent his boyhood and youth, gradually becoming an acknowledged leader of his companions. As such he continued for many years. His life is a fine example for any young man or boy of the present generation to follow. Of course the same opportunities are not possible now, but there are others, fully as golden. Remember, his life proclaims: "Don't wait until you are old. Take a keen interest in public affairs while you are young. Strike hard for what you believe is right. Have no fear of defeat. If you never try, there is no hope of your winning. The great leaders are going away. The young must take their places."

The funeral of the deceased took place last Saturday from Crosbie's chapel, Burlingame, under the auspices of the Episcopal chruch. The following were the pall bearers: Herman Schaeberg of Redwood City, T. D. Lorton, Charles Wirick, Fred J. Fendler and John Wisnom of San Mateo, and W. J. Savage of Daly City.

This eulogy is concluded with a list of the leading competitors of J. H. Hatch, all of whom were prominent in the past political drama of our county: P. P. Chamberalin, county treasurer for many years; John F. Johnston, the gilt-edged county clerk; William H. Lawrence, the friendly supervisor from the Second township and county manager of Spring Valley Water Co.; Edward F. Fitzpatrick, the witty lawyer and powerful manipulator; George C. Ross, the painstaking, legal counselor who was depended upon to overlook no vital point at issue; Joseph Debenedetti, the best judge of human nature and supervisor of the Fourth township for twelve years; P. H. McEvoy, the stately, independent, autocratic supervisor of the Third township for three terms; John MacBain, noted for honesty and good heartedness, despite his loud voice and blustering manner, also from the Third township; Henry C. Hall, the brilliant teacher, fluent writer and speaker, and lover of the political game, from Menlo Park; James T. Casey, the bulwark of the northend, who never hesitated over money, time, or distance, to put through an idea that he considered of public importance; E. E. Cunningham, the Civil war veteran, who did his utmost for South San Francisco; George H. Rice, the original searcher of records of Redwood City; James Crowe, the first and the typical undertaker, whose appropriate gentleness at the hour of mourning and consistent belief in the oil of joy took the sting away from death; William H. Brown, representative of a powerful following at San Mateo and a dependable supervisor during a highly progressive period; L. P. Behrens, the introducer of banking in the county, being the founder of the First National Bank at Redwood City; George R. Sneath, the famous Jersey Farm dairyman and financier of San Bruno, whose enterprise affected conditions materially; Robert Miller of Belmont, the eccentric money-lender, who held many farm mortgages and enjoyed giving advice to ambitious young men; Father James Cooper of San Mateo and Colma, who kept track of every move, knew all the players and enjoyed their high regard, but never hurt any of them. All of these have gone before. Only a few of J. H. Hatch's colleagues remain to carry on.

SANTA ROSAN HEADS MOTORISTS' ORGANIZATION

D. H. Lafferty of Santa Rosa, civic leader and pioneer good roads advocate, is the new president of the California State Automobile Association, the motorists' organization of Northern and Central California. He was elected to leadership of organized motordom for 1930 by the board of directors of the association at its annual meeting in San Francisco.

Other officers elected for 1930 were: R. I. Bentley, of San Francisco, first vice-president; E. B. DeGolia, of San Francisco, second vice-president; John R. Graham, of Merced, third vice-president; George S. Forderer, of San Francisco, treasurer; and D. E. Watkins, of San Francisco, secretary and general manager.

THE EAGLES NEST

Last Saturday evening the regular meeting of the Eagles was held and one of the largest crowds of the year was on hand.

The sick committee reported all sick brother convalescing.

Initiation of candidates was in order and twenty candidates responded and were initiated.

Brothers Rodenberger, Adams and Bolger were on the Associated Aerie committee to visit with San Jose on Tuesday evening, January 21.

The building committee reported that the lots would be looked into.

On Tuesday evening the Associated Aerie committee visited with San Jose Aerie.

The social committee served an appetizing lunch after the meeting. Interesting addresses were made by some of the new members and visiting Eagles. D. D. Haggerty, of Maricopa, state organizer, gave an inspirational talk, also Brother Gus Pohlman, of San Francisco, state secretary. All in all an enjoyable time was had by all, and those that failed to come were the losers.

On next Tuesday, January 28, the Associated Aerie meeting will be held in South San Francisco. A large delegation from Daly City has signified intention of going. The more the merrier.

DATE NIGHT PLANNED FOR BAPTIST CHAPEL

At the Calvary Baptist Chapel, 5724 Mission street (formerly known as Calvary Baptist Mission) the topic for next Sunday morning's address by the pastor, Rev. Charles Woessner, will be "The Cosmic Christ." In the evening the topic will be "Two Kinds of Pay." The pastor's topic for five minute discussion will be: "Should young people, who hold distinctly different religious beliefs, marry?"

Mrs. J. A Williams, 100½ Sickles avenue, is organizing the cradle-roll department. A special cradle-roll service is to be held during the regular church period on February 28. Mothers who have babies of the cradle-roll age are urged to get in touch with Mrs. Wililams.

The study of "The Bible: It's Christ and Modernism," is being studied each Friday night at the Chapel. Mr. William Savidge, Director of Music, who is carrying on this study class, is making this period of study a worth while hour. The session lasts only from 8 to 9 o'clock, and it is urged that the public should take advantage of this hour of Biblical enlightenment.

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock "The Life and Achievements of William Carey" will be given by the pastor.

Special arrangements have been made for Young People's Night at the regular church service of February 9. It will be termed "date night," when all young people will be urged to bring their "dates" to church. There will be reserved seats for these young couples. The pastor will tell of the world's greatest lovers, as Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Romeo and Juliet, and others. Love will be the central theme and the entire program will be distinctly different in its presentation. All couples are urged "to date out" for Calvary Baptist Chapel for this special service.

SURVEY RUSHED FOR WIDENING HIGHWAY

The survey of El Camino Real between the southern boundary of San Mateo and the county line bridge at Palo Alto to determine uniform property setback lines for widening of the highway to 100 feet, is more than half completed, but the detailed report on the work is several months off, George A. Kneese, county surveyor, reported last Monday.

The field crew had completed the survey to the northern limit of Redwood City. Two weeks have already been spent by draftsmen in Kneese's office in preparing the data.

The report on the west side of the highway is being completed first, because the citizens' body that urged the survey argued that the increasing number of residents settling west of the highway made this problem the more important.

The proposed setback involves five municipalities—Belmont, San Carlos, Redwood City, Menlo Park and Atherton. Municipal goverments of all these cities have pledged aid.

Once Kneese's repotr is ready, the highway-widening association, the state highway commission and interested municipalities will commence a study to determine policy in condemnation of the land.

It may be decided to take the necessary strip for widening entirly from one side, or divide it on both sides of the highway, Kneese said.

Following that financing of the widening must be considered.

There is every possibility that when the widening is undertaken in San Mateo county it will be continued into Santa Clara county by the highway commission.

The commission has already acquired land in Menlo Park for widening the road across the San Francisquito creek bridge. It is the plan of the commission to straighten out the curve just south of the bridge when the widening is started.

BE CAREFUL AT CROSSINGS; OBSERVE RIGHT-OF-WAY RULE

In its all-year highway safety program, the California Committee on Public Safety is emphasizing this month the need of caution at the intersections. Approximately seventy per cent of motor vehicle crashes occur where roads or streets cross, and it is pointed out by the Committee that law alone cannot prevent such accidents. The drivers themselves must exercise care and courtesy.

The law gives the right-of-way to the vehicle entering the intersection first. If the entry is simultaneous, the car on the right should be given the right-of-way.

Most arguments over the right-of-way come after an accident. Why not lose half a minute of time and avert an accident, instead of taking a chance, asks the safety organization.

"Lose a minute and save a life" is the slogan for January. Incidentally, state traffic officers and traffic officers in major cities are watchful especially for violators of the right-of-way this month. As individuals, motorists should co-operate in this statewide movement to reduce the traffic accident toll in California which now holds the unenviable record of leading all other states in motor vehicle fatalities.

Sam says, bitterly, that the only thing I need to explain is the one thing that can ever be explained: how one girl, by changing her clothes and by washing her face, could turn a houseful of supposedly sensible people into a packet of blithering, bat-blind fools for a generous period of time. I can explain that, I think: but I am going to leave it until later, and go clear back to the second of July, the day that Gabrielle received the code letter.

In her talk with John (John says it was in no sense a confession, that it was nothing but a taunt for us all, a final, regretless, high fling of defiance) there in his room, during the twenty minutes or so that she talked to him, before she shot herself, some things, which might still not be clear to us, were made plain. Also, many of Miss MacDonald's previously formed opinions were directly or indirectly verified. Miss MacDonald had said, you remember, that the murder had been wickedly premeditated.

"When I read that letter," Gabrielle said to John, "and found myself penniless and planless on a Nevada ranch, I at once made up my mind to kill Danielle, the little fool, and take her place."

How she persuaded Danny to accept the idea of the masquerade, and to change clothes with her, on the fourth of July, we do not positively know. That is the "hole" that Miss MacDonald mentioned in her puzzle. To my mind, there is little doubt that she gained her way very easily, by using her own unhappiness and disappointment as tools with which to remove Danny's scruples and prod her pity. I am sure, remembering Danny's troubled manner at the time, that she consented unwillingly, that she thoroughly disliked the idea, and that she was afraid of its consequences.

When the two girls went upstairs together, on the afternoon of the fourth of July, they must have gone to effect the transformation. Perhaps, then, for a brief minute or two, the thing did seem amusing to Danny; for I know that I heard the girls laughing together, as I have mentioned, when I was on my errand upstairs.

We do not know, when the disguise had been completed, by what pretext Gabrielle lured Danny into the attic. Their trunks were in the attic. There could be a dozen simple reasons why Danny might consent to go up there with her. Coming downstairs again, Gabrielle caught her by the throat and strangled her, instantly, by means of the deadly jiu-jitsu hold, which she had learned from her "Strangler" lover. It is a hold that requires little strength—though Gabrielle's trained fingers were strong enough—but much scientific skill.

She took the earrings from Danny's ears—or, perhaps, Danny had not yet put them on—went to her own room, arranged her make-up, got into the wrap, which completely covered Danny's clothes that she was wearing, pulled the hat down over her eyes to conceal the change in hairdressing, and walked through the living room, for us all to see her, at four o'clock.

When Chad went to the porch with her (this John found out by insistent questioning) she told him that Danny had left the house, earlier, by the back way. That she and Danny had arranged a joke on the rest of us, to enliven the dull afternoon, and asked him to help with it by calling, in Danny's voice to her, when he came back into the house. Chad did it. That was why, since he was standing down by the front doors, the voice supposed to come from the upper hall had a strained and an unnatural sound. Gabrielle had reckoned that Chad, in spite of her request, would be too stupid to discover the facts. Probably she thought that, at any rate, she would be able to impose silence upon him. It was one of her many mistakes. We think that he must have known for the remainder of the afternoon that Gabrielle was masquerading as Danny. His happy mood was caused by the fact that Gabrielle had given him a confidence and had allowed him to perform a small service for her. When he saw what had happened, and when he realized that the girl whom he had worshipped was a murderer, he killed himself. Strange, that in spite of everything, he still loved her enough to leave the confessional note to shield her. The men think that he left the note to shield the rest of us, rather than to shield her. I do not believe it.

She had planned to go straight around the house and re-enter it through the back door. Martha's being by the rabbit hutch was something she had not counted on. It was necessary to distract Martha's attention, and to get her to come at once into the house. She gave her the monkey bracelet. As she did so, probably because of the act of kindness, Martha made one of her frequent mistakes and called Gabrielle "Danny." Gabrielle told John (concerning Martha, John also questioned her insistently) that she then showed Martha the poison in the charm, and told her that it was a love potion that would make Chad love her, "like a lady," if she would swallow it, and never tell anyone anything about it.

Martha out of the way, Gaby must have run quickly around to the back of the house and up the back stairway. To toss the hat and wrap on the body, replace the earrings, scatter the pipe ashes over the beaded bag (I declare to goodness, I can more easily think of her lying there in her white silk dressing gown, than I can think of her, brushing those pipe ashes up, from somewhere, in order to save them for that purpose), and drop the tatting shuttle there, required not more than one or two minutes of time. Another two or three minutes to wash her face thoroughly and to douse on some of Danny's perfume, and she was coming downstairs again, with the headache that necessitated the drawing of the curtains—to make her safety a bit safer, just at first.

She told John that those few minutes when she had to walk through the room, make the trip around the house, and get upstairs again, were the only moments of fright that she had had, from the first to the last. Once safely established in the role of Danny, she said, she knew that she had nothing to fear.

I think, however, that there were other times when she was afraid. I am certain that real fear was there in her room, that day, when the engagement ring dropped from her finger. Though I believe that her fear, then, was caused wholly from superstition, and not from any dread that the slight difference between her hands and Danny's hands might be noticed.

I am sure that her fear for John, on the fourth of July, was real enough She knew that each minute he was away, longer than the time necessary for the trip, was a minute lost from the perfect alibi she had so mistakenly tried to arrange for him by sending him away from the ranch. She had not known that Danny's fingers had closed on the stair's tread. When John came in the back way she was afraid that it would be remembered later—as it was—and that some one would suspect—as Hubert Hand did suspect—that John had carried the body in at that time.

She had counted on her note to Danny, and on the fact that, as Danny, she was downstairs within ten or twelve minutes after the time we had seen Gaby walking down the path and had heard Danny's voice calling after her, to prove her own innocence. They, and the gentleness of Danny's disposition, did this to perfection.

Her original plan had been to prove that Sam was the murderer. With Sam out of the way, and with John in possession of his fortune, she had thought, I suppose, that she would have no trouble in persuading John to leave the Desert Moon. But she was afraid of the idea. Knowing John's devotion to Sam, she could not reckon, with any sureness, how disgrace and sorrow might affect John. It was too big a risk to take, unreservedly. So, though she picked the quarrel with Sam, strewed the pipe ashes on the bag, put the key in the fireplace, wrote on the photograph, she left loopholes in the shapes of the many other false clews. It is only my own notion that, if she had not thought the definite accusation of Sam, which she made during the session on the fifth of July, was necessary to protect John, she would have backed out, by that time, and not have made it.

It is again only my notion that the request, which she put in her note to Danny, to have Danny take her body to San Francisco for cremation, was made because she thought that it would be desirable for her to be able to leave the ranch at once—perhaps for several weeks. Mrs. Ricker's expressed suspicion probably made her realize the wisdom of returning as rapidly as possible to the Desert Moon.

Gabrielle Canneziano was a born criminal. Almost all of her life had been spent among criminals. She knew their ways, and she knew the ways of honest people toward them. Consequently, she was too clever to drop her disguise, even for a minute, in San Francisco. When, on the afternoon of the fourth of July, she had come downstairs as Danny, she had come resolved from that time forth to be Danny, in thought and in deed, up to the level best of her ability. That she never doubted her ability to turn from black to white within the space of an hour, is a splendid example of Miss MacDonald's contention concerning the egotism of criminals.

Miss MacDonald says that her first real clew was the one I gave to her when I said that no one, except Gaby herself, who would do such a wicked thing, had ever been on the ranch. If she had been on the ranch, she might have committed the murder. She had all three of the primary motives for murder: love, revenge, and greed. The unique feature in this case—Miss MacDonald says that each case has its unique feature—was that the murdered girl had been a duplicate twin.

The hazy, incomplete notion, Miss MacDonald says, had just come into her mind; she had not begun to accept it, she was only allowing it, dimly, to take form, when I returned to the room that day with my hand full of letters written by Danny. Handwriting, as surely as fingerprints, Miss MacDonald says, proves identity.

She asked me, straight, whether I had seen Danny writing the checks and addressing the envelopes. I answered, straight and positively, that I had. (And Miss MacDonald had warned me that people often thought that they saw things they did not see.)

I had not. I had seen the person whom I supposed was Danny writing checks and addressing envelopes. I had turned my back on her, and had walked to the door, when she called after me and gave me the envelopes containing the checks.

Danny herself had written those checks and had addressed those envelopes on the third of July. Owing to all the furore that had been going on in the house that day, she had left her desk before she had torn the checks from her checkbook, and had never gone back to it to finish her task. It is possible that Gabrielle had deliberately arranged that, also; but I think not. At any rate, she had had the checks in her possession, and had waited for a date that had a three, or an eight in it, to produce them. Circumstances and I played well into her hands that day; she had only to insert a one in front of the three to make me her fool.

Miss MacDonald, as you have seen, blames herself and not me for the mistake. She says that she should have known better than to believe me; or, to quote her exactly, she should have "doubted your accuracy of observation." But, not until the morning that we found Daniel Canneziano murdered did it occur to her to doubt it.

She says that it was not clairvoyance, not intuition, not even common sense, that it was nothing but a memory that took her, that morning, straight back to the idea that Gabrielle Canneziano could be the guilty person. Oddly, the conviction had come to her before we found Canneziano's body.

Sitting across the table from Gabrielle, posing as Danny, that morning at breakfast, she had thought, idly, of the breakfast that she and Danny had had together in the dining car. She had taken her chair, that morning, just as Danny had handed the order slip for her breakfast to the waiter. Too vaguely to be certain that it was really a memory, she seemed to see that slip of paper covered with writing. Just then, with the aroma of coffee in her nostrils, and with her iced grapefruit and rolls in front of her, she remembered that it was the same breakfast both she and Danny had had that morning. Would such a small order cover an order slip with handwriting? Not, it was certain, with the neat handwriting that had made out those checks and addressed those envelopes. Right then she resolved to lose no more time; to get, as soon as possible, a sample of the handwriting of the girl who was sitting across the table from her.

Canneziano's murder, discovered in the next half hour, strengthened her vague suspicions into as much of a certainty as she ever allowed herself before she had positive evidence.

As I have written, she spent the following week in efforts to get that evidence; at last, fearing that she was suspected, she detailed the task to me.

You have seen how I failed. How Gabrielle at once saw through my trick of attempting to disable my right hand by burning it; and how, realizing that she was trapped, she had run upstairs, first to satisfy her longing to be herself again, even for a few brief moments, then to taunt John, and, finally, to take her own life.

For I think, in spite of her denials to John, that she killed herself because she knew that she was trapped, though her vanity and her audacity held to the end.

"I knew I should have no trouble in making you believe that silly doll story," she said. "It was the truth, I knew, too, that the dick would read the code letter. She was so slow about it, that I had to steal it to make her do it. It was time, you see, for the gentle Danielle's story to be verified.

"Don't fancy that I had overlooked the matter of the handwriting. I'm not a fool. I thought of it before I killed the girl. There were a dozen ways I could have gotten around it—could yet get around it. If necessary, I could even have disabled my own right hand. I had rather planned, at first, to do that. But, later, I found that I loved my pretty little white hand better than I had supposed. Just as I have discovered that I loved the gay Gaby better than I had supposed—so well, indeed, that I have decided that death as Gaby is infinitely preferable to life as the shiny nosed Danielle. I have seen this coming. I have not cared.

"I got rid of that cur, Canneziano, not because I was afraid of him, but because he tried to double-cross me. I had promised to do much for him, after you and I were married; and he would have sold me out for a few thousand dollars. He came here, hoping that Danny might pay him a pretty sum for his silence about my past. He knew his muttons. She would have been fool enough to have done it; poor slain sister stuff; more to be pitied than blamed—all that, you know. He should have played with me, instead of against me. I had a few old scores to settle with him. Most of my rage about the money was because I had thought it would be such good fun to get the best of him. And I did—so that is all right. I hid in his room early that evening. It was frightfully amusing to watch him locking his door and his windows to make his sleep a safe one. It was. I did the job so neatly that he never woke at all.

"For that matter, it has all been amusing. You have all been such utter fools. But I am tired of it now. Oh, very tired. Particularly, I am tired of my cruel plan to destroy the gay Gaby by burying her alive. I am going now to do it in a swifter, kinder way."

Sam insists that her success, even for so short a time, is an indictment against all of us; that it shows that none of us was capable of looking deeper than clothes and face paint. I do not agree with him. Gabrielle was a professional actress. She had lived with Danny long enough to learn all her ways, her mannerisms, her habits in conversation. She did not dupe Chad, who loved her, and who was an expert in voices. She did not dupe Canneziano, who had known both of the girls all their lives.

The murder itself, by stupefying us all with horror, with fear, with suspicions, did much to help her. But without that dulling of our perceptions, I think that the imposture would have been successful. At the time of the murder, the two girls had been on the ranch with us less than two months. Strangers never get much deeper than surfaces in so short a time. There was nothing remarkable, it seems to me, about her being able, quite easily, to deceive all of us, with the single, glaring exception of John.

When John came home from Rattail, on the fourth of July, he was faced with the apparent fact that Danny, in the course of a few hours, had changed essentially. That was what had bothered him so; what had made him jerk his head, and blink his eyes, and complain of a touch of sun. John had never recognized, much less admitted to himself, that there was the slightest similarity between the two girls. Consequently, in spite of a change, Danny must be Danny; she looked like Danny, she talked like Danny, and we all said that she was Danny. John believed.

He at once set the fact of Danny's change against the fact of Gaby's murder—and there he stuck fast; too loyal to go further; too dismayed to retreat. He did not believe that Danny had killed Gabrielle. He had known Danny too well to harbor such a belief. He was forced to believe that she knew who had done it. Consequently, her accusation of Sam could be nothing but a wicked accusation. Only—Danny could not be wicked.

The mystery was a torture which Danny's presence intensified unbearably; so he avoided her; and, unable to blame her for anything, blamed himself and hated himself for his suspicions and for his failing loyalty. I'll venture, though it can be only a venture, that the realization of his interest in Miss MacDonald, and his inability to be rid of it, was another cause for John's befuddlement.

That interest, of course, has all disappeared for the present. Though he despised himself for it, John might have been untrue to a changed, living Danny; might, in the end, have jilted her meanly. John is male. But to a Danny who is no longer living, John, now, must always be true. John is young. I reckon he has fine honest plans for being faithful to her memory for the remainder of his life. Miss MacDonald is also young, and lovely, and heart whole. She has promised to come and visit us for a month next June.

Just now, with out thermometers at fifty below zero, and our chilblains burning, and the coyotes piercing the nights with their lank, long, frozen screeches, and the cold old owls always grieving forth their mournful "chuck-a-loo, whoo, whoo, whoo's" June looks mighty far away.

But, five fingers and a thumb, and she will be here, smelling of sunshine and tasting like smiles; painting our deserts with rainbow colors for us as far as the eyes can see; spreading sunsets that catch you right up into their midsts; offering dawns that share their youth with you and that make you believe all over again in things which you had long ago stopped believing. Now I don't know shucks about romance; but I have a notion that June, in our northeastern Nevada, stirs up whole batches of the stuff. I am counting on her to serve it, fresh and sweet, this year.

It isn't June, though, and it isn't romance that I am trusting for the final chore: it is something more lasting than either, something sturdier, something for which I cannot find a name. But I know that it is induced by a mixture of long years of right living, and clean thinking, and sanity, and courage; so I am expecting it to clear away the shadows from the Desert Moon and leave it, riding high as it used to ride, high and proud, a brave, shining thing in our valley.

[THE END.]

Roger Bacon First to Talk of Metal Airship

In the all-metal airship we see realized an eight-century-old Baconian project. In the Thirteenth century, says Domestic Air News, United States Department of Commerce, Roger Bacon, English philosopher and Franciscan friar, seems to have been the first to realize the principles of aerostation, if we discard Kircher and the legends.

Bacon wrote in glowing language on the possibility of constructing engines of immense size and power that could traverse the land and the water with great speed and carry with them persons and merchandise.

He proposed the construction of an aerial machine which "must be a large hollow globe of copper or other suitable material . . . filled with 'ethereal air or liquid fire' (some have claimed Bacon referred to rarefied air and hydrogen gas) and then launched from some elevated point into the atmosphere, where it will float like a vessel on the water."

There may be made, Bacon said, "flying machines so that a man sits in the midst of the machine revolving some engine by which artificial wings are made to beat the air like a flying bird."

The idea of the rigid airship may be traced from Bacon through Albertus de Saxonia (1350), Mendoza (1503-'75), Lana (1670), Gourdin (1783), Delcourt (1824), Monge (1843), Giffard (1855), Spiess (1873), Bausset (1888), Schwartz (1897) to Zeppelin (1900), all of whom proposed metal for the hull.

Stone Revealed History

The famous Moabite stone, set up by Mesha, king of Moab, to commemorate his name and his victory over Israel, has thrown light on Bible history. And until not long before the World war, the name of Hezekiah outlasted well-nigh twenty-six centuries, unseen and unsuspected, upon the wall of the wonderful tunnel, one-third of a mile in length, that he carved through the rock beneath Jerusalem to connect the Virgin's spring with the pool of Siloam within his city walls.

Not Original With Lincoln

The saying, "You cannot fool all of the people, all of the time" is commonly attributed to Abraham Lincoln and also to P. T. Barnum, though it is not in their biographies. A little book published by A. Wessels company in 1903, "The Wisdom of Abraham Lincoln," gives this as a quotation from Lincoln's speech at Clinton, Ill., on September 8, 1858. It is quite likely that this was a proverb or popular saying long before he uttered it. A book of old English proverbs lists a similar saying: "No one is a fool always; every one sometimes."

Priceless Gavel

When the presiding officer of the Chicago Association of Commerce raps for order at future meetings, he will rap with a renewed authority. It is no common gavel that calls the members to attention for it helped literally to keep the roof over the heads of 26 Presidents of the United States.

The gavel was carved from one of the main wooden roof trusses of the White House when the repairs to the roof were made, during the Coolidge administration.

CHEMICALS IN NEXT WAR

The next war, if one should unhappily involve the great nations, will be fought largely with chemicals, according to many who have given study to the developement of deadly gases which would be available for military purposes.

A recent publication said to be of authoritative authorship declares that while 30 asphyxiating gases were known at the beginning of the World War, there are now more than 1,000, including many varieties of "blistering gases, coughing gases, sneezing gases, choking gases, vomiting gases, tear gases and suffocating smoke."

Fumes heavier than air might be spread over wide areas where they would linger for days, killing everything within their deadly embrace. By means of such gases dropped from airplanes whole cities might be wiped out in short order.

A recent writer sees in those horrible possibilites a hope for peace, on the theory that in future statesmen who consider resorting to war will be restrained from doing so by the certain knowledge that these awful means of distruction would be brought into play to destroy women and children as well as fighting men.

That these means would be used in spite of all the treaties that might be made, can not be doubted. "Necessity has no law" and this is especially true of necessity in time of war. Therefore a great nation which goes to war in future must be willing to subject its entire population to the risk of wholesale slaughter, if not extermination.

Twelve bottles of whiskey were among the articles carelessly left on trains of a western railroad during a few months.

VAGARIES OF GENIUS

Nothing is quite so mysterious as the workings of the human mind. A study of men classed as geniuses generally shows them to be a little "cracked" in certain respects. Sometimes their peculiarities have led to positive insanity. A few examples will illustrate:

Napoleon was afraid of a cat; Peter the Great was afraid to cross a bridge; Martin Luther imagined that the devil appeared to him and he threw his ink bottle at the fiend; Samuel Johnson, Beethoven and Lincoln at times contemplated suicide.

Among the ridiculous antics of great men may be mentioned the occasional habit of Cardinal Richelieu to gallop around a billiard table, imagining himself to be a horse. Adam Smith the great economist, once walked 12 miles to church, clad only in his nightshirt. Bentham, the philosopher, went bareheaded in winter and wore heavy leather gloves in summer. Many men of genius have been shockingly lax in morals as measured by adopted standards.

All this does not mean, however, that being a bit nutty is an infallible sign of genius.

The idea that silence is golden has never made much headway among barbers, but the case of Joe Perricone of New York is one exception that proves the rule. He never worries customers with conversation nor with annoying importunities to have singes, massages or tonics they do not want. A wealthy customer is taking him on a vacation to Florida in appreciation.

Don't be discouraged if your son is a moron. He may be a great success in getting up intelligence tests.

JUDGING OTHERS

It is trite to say that in judging the character and motives of another person we should try to imagine ourselves in his place. But how many of us do it? How many of us make a conscious and determined effort to be fair in our estimate of the other fellow?

In a recent article Dr. Glenn Frank quoted an unknown author who has set forth some thoughts in this connection which are worth repeating, as follows:

"When the other felow acts that way, he is ugly; when you do, it is nerves.

"When the other fellow is set in his way, he's obstinate; when you are, it's firmness.

"When the other felow treats someone especially well, he is toadying; when you do it's tact.

"When the other fellow takes his time, he is dead slow; when you do, your are deliberate.

"When the other fellow picks a flaw, he's cranky; when you do, you are discriminating.

"When the other fellow says what he thinks, he is spiteful; when you do, you are frank," and so on.

It is really hard to apply to ourselves the same yardstick which we use in measuring our neighbor. But we ought to try to do it.

A WISCONSIN PRODIGY

One of the scholastic stars of the young generation is Miss Mary Willis of Albany, Wis., whose attainments were described in a recent news item, which noted that she had received her master of arts degree at the age of 18, and was soon to become a full-fledged Ph. D.

Her precocity was manifested early, and when only 18 months old she knew most of the better-known nursery rhymes and several poems. She began her formal education at 4; had read much standard literature, including "Pilgrim's Progress," some Shakespeare, the Bible, a book of ancient history and other works before she was 6; finished grammer school at 9, and was graduated from high school at 13 as valedictorian of her class. Her college training was received at the University of Wisconsin, from which she was graduated last June.

Miss Willis is the daughter of Preston Willis, high school principal of her home town, to whose guidance in her early years her rapid advancement is no doubt largely due.

While her scholarship is not unprecedented for one of her age, it is most unusual, and with continued aplication in some congenial field of effort she should go far.

WHY CHANGE THE CALENDAR?

George Eastman, of Kodak fame, is an enthusiastic supporter of Calendar revision. As chairman of a national committte he recently sent out a questionnaire, inquiring among other things as to which form of revised calendar was preferred. A total of 1,433 replies were received. Over 98 per cent expressed preference for the Cotsworth plan.

Now what are the advantages that business men see in this calendar? Here are some of them:

1. The fact that every month would be like every other month would cause every date in the month to have a fixed place in the week. For example, the 7th of the month would always be a Saturday, the 9th always a Monday.

2. The complete four weeks would exactly quarter all months, harmonizing weekly wages and expenses with monthly rent, accounts, etc. There would be no fractions of weeks at month ends.

3. Every month would have the same number of working days.

4. Pay days would recur on the same monthly date.

5. Holidays and other fixed monthdates would always occur on the same week-day.

6. The reckoning of lapse of time for interest and other purposes would be greatly simplified.

7. As there would be thirteen monthly settlements during the year instead of twelve, there would be a faster turnover in money; the same volume of business could be handled for less money.

8. There would be a saving in printed calendars, and of time in referring to them. They would be superfluous.

9. The climax of this series of reasons, and the one most generally mentioned by business men who have replied to the various questionnaires is that this calendar would make comparative statistics absolutely reliable. And comparative statistics are the compass and chart of modern business. February would be accurately compared with January, three days short as it now is. A retail store, for example, would no longer have to make adjustments for the five Saturdays of one month as compared with the four of another.—Kingsley Gray, in Forbes Magazine.

The installment idea has spread to the courts. Leland Sapp of Wichita, Kan., was recently convicted of violating traffic laws and sentenced to spend four and a half hours in jail each day for a week.

It is estimated that about 700,000 persons now living in the United States were married before reaching the age of 16.

THE GOVERNOR IS RIGHT

To deter people from committing crimes, certainty of punishment is more effective "than all the moral suasion and psychopathic treatment that penologists can prescribe," in the belief of Governor Theodore Christianson of Minnesota.

If, by example, the so-called potential criminal element could be rid of the idea that escape from punishment was 90 per cent certain through pardon, parole and legal red tape generally, it is safe to say that a 75 per cent reduction in crime would be noticeable almost over night.

As long as laws are not enforced and punishment is considered only as a hazy probability, crime will continue to flourish as one of the biggest industries in the country today, costing legitimate business and law-abiding individuals mililons of dollars annually, to say nothing of a countless number of human lives.

And the best remedy that many law-makers can suggest is "more laws" for the criminals to "obey." What a joke! They merely restrict law-abiding citizens.

CALIFORNIA MOTORISTS USE MORE GASOLINE

California motorists use nearly fifty per cent more gasoline and oil than does the average motorist the country over, according to the California State Automobile Association.

The average expenditure is estimated for all of the United States at nearly $126 annually, while in California the motorist expends $185 each year for gas and oil.

Colma News Notes

Mrs. Marie Landis, of Milbrae, was visiting her sister, Mrs. John Olcese, during the early part of this week.

Don't forget to register. Angelo Stampanoni, deputy registrar, will be glad to serve you. Everyone must re-register this year.

The friends of Mrs. W. C. Wardwell are sorry to hear that she is confined to her bed, suffering from a severe cold, and wish her a speedy recovery.

The friends of Mrs. Kunze are sorry to hear she has been on the sick list for the past two weeks and under the doctor's care, and wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. M. Zipser and family motored with a large group of relatives and friends to the Yosemite Valley over last week end, where they enjoyed the winter sports, having a wonderful time.

Cypress Circle, United Ancient Order of Druids, held their monthly whist party last Wednesday evening at Colma Community Center Hall. All present report spending a very enjoyable evening.

Mrs. M. P. Brown entertained the members of the Girls' Club of Colma at her home Wednesday evening of last week. The regular form of business proceeded and a general pleasant evening followed.

The regular weekly whist party will be held this Friday evening in the social hall of Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, on Wellington avenue, Daly City. A cordial welcome is extended to their many Colma friends.

Giovanni Carpena, partner of the Valley Hog Co., Colma, who was recently married, is now residing on Knowles avenue, Daly City, with his bride. The happy couple have the congratulations and best wishes for a very happy and prosperous future from their many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Arata and family, of Mission street, entertained a group of friends last Wednesday evening at their home. Dancing was enjoyed, after which dainty refreshments were served.

The many friends of Mrs. George L. Lagomarsino, nee Hazel Lorenz, who has been quite ill and under the doctor's care in a San Francisco hospital, are happy to hear she is doing nicely and wish her a speedy recovery.

The thirteenth annual ball of the Marconi Social Club will be given on Sunday evening, February 2, at the Colombo Auditorium. Music for the dancing will be furnished by Dell, and all attending are assured a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Pessagno are receiving the congratulations of their many friends upon the arrival of a fine 9-pound son, born at St. Luke's hospital. Mrs. Pessagno and son returned to their home on Bryant street this week, and both are reported as doing nicely.

Little Miss Lillian Kosta, of Railroad avenue, who fell while playing in the grounds of the Jefferson grammar school recently, is reported confined to her home, being unable to walk. Lillian is under the doctor's care, and her little playmates extend their sympathy and sincere wishes for a speedy recovery.

The Capp Street Girls' Club of San Francisco, of which several local young ladies are members, reopened their club rooms for the new semester last week. Mr. John Barry opened the evening with an hour lecture on current and entertaining topics. Every one present report having spent a very enjoyable and educational evening.

Word has been received that Mrs. Geo. Michaels, nee Frances Woolsey, who has been very sick and confined to her bed at the home of her mother, Mrs. Emma Woolsey, on Mission road, Colma, is improving slowly. Mrs. Michaels is under the doctor's care and still unable to leave her bed. Her many friends are happy to hear of her improved condition and hope it will continue.

MRS. BARSI PASSES AWAY AFTER LINGERING ILLNESS

The many friends of Mrs. Dorothy Frances Barsi were pained to her of her passing away last Tuesday after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Barsi was the beloved wife of Peter J. Barsi, loving mother of Vincent C. Barsi, devoted daughter of Charles and Fanny Lampard, and loving sister of Leslie Lampard. She was a native of Menlo Park, California, and was 28 years years of age. Mrs. Barsi was a member of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star.

Funeral services will be held this Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock from Gray's in San Francisco. Interment will be at Cypress Lawn Memorial Park.

DALY CITY THEATRE HAS WEEK OF "HITS"

Dauglas MacLean and a party of Paramount's best funmakers will be the feature attraction at the Daly City Theatre tomororw, where they will appear in "Divorce Made Easy," a screamingly funny talking farce on married life with its ups and downs.

For Sunday, playing a continuous performance, the Daly City will present Warner Brothers' Vitaphone attraction, "The Gamblers," with a host of star players, including Jason Robards, Lois Wilson, H. B. Warner and Johnny Arthur. On the same bill there will be a Mickey Mouse cartoon and other big attractions.

Opening Monday for a two day run, Warner Boothers' big Vitaphone special, "On With the Show," will be the feature attraction. "On With the Show" is the first 100 per cent natural color all talking, singing and dancing picture play. It is from the same studios as "Desert Song," and critics everywhere have acclaimed it as one of the season's greatest entertainment specials. Included in the cast of players will be some of the screen's greatest talking personalities. Betty Compson holds the lead and is supported by such favorites as Joe Brown, Arthur Lake, Sally O'Neill, Louise Fazenda, Sam Hardy and Wheeler Oakman. There will be other delightful subjects on the same bill.

For Wednesday and Thursday the Daly City Theatre has booked the first run showing of Radio Pictures' great talking special, "Tanned Legs," with Albert Gran and Sally Blane.

All of the above picture talking plays will be presented over the Colorart Synchrotone Sound System, the very latest and best in theatrical presentations.

Russia has made up with China, but will hardly confer a peace prize on Secretary Stimson.

Americanism: Getting mad when a foreigner says what he thinks of some of our customs.

DALY CITY THEATRE SIGNS FOR SEASON'S BIG HITS

Manager Kelsall of the Daly City Theatre announces that he has just completed buying for his next season's talking film attractions with the world's largest producers, that will bring to the Daly City the first run privilege over all other district houses, including all houses on Mission street with the exception of the New Mission Theatre. The entire output of the First National Vitaphone Pictures, Columbia Pictures Corporation, Radio Keith Orpheum Pictures, Tiffany-Stahl Attractions will have their first district showing at the Daly City Theatre.

These contracts run into thousands of dollars, but the Jefferson Theatre Corporation authorized their manager to go the limit to secure for Daly City the year's best pictures from the best known producers. This has been done, and will bring to Daly City first such attractions as "Sally," the wonder all color attraction now at the California; "Paris," with Irene Bordini, "Son of the Gods," "No, No, Nanette," "Rio Rita," "The Vagabond Lover," "Flight," "Mamba," and many others too numerous to mention.

These attractions will assure Daly City patrons of the privilege of seeing their favorite stars at an early date, without having to go to downtown theatres. The first of the big super-attractions will be "The Isle of Lost Ships," a First National Vitaphone attraction, to be followed closely by "Flight" and "Rio Rita."

"SHOW OF SHOWS" BREAKS ALL ATTENDANCE RECORDS

Attendance records at the Embassy Theatre received an awful set-back last week during the first seven days of "Show of Shows." Not in the history of this Wm. B. Wagnor house has San Francisco shown such interest in any one production. As "Show of Shows" starts its second sensational week, there is every indication that there will be no let-up in attendance. "Show of Shows" is a remarkable picture that merits all the consideration it has been getting.

Some of those who appear in "Show of Shows" are John Barrymore, Richard Barthelmess, Winnie Lightner, Irene Bordoni, Nick Lucas, Frank Fay, Betty Compson, Beatrice Lillie, Ted Lewis, Georges Carpentier, Ben Turpin, Dolores Costello, Chester Conklin and Louise Fazenda.

All extremely old people, it seems, either used lots of whisky and tobacco, or none.

VIRGINIA LEADS THE WAY

In 1928, the state of Virginia appointed a commission to prepare a program for the relief of agriculture in that state. The report of this commission has just been made public.

One of its chief recommendations is for the extension of construction activity upon farm-to-market roads as feeders for the state highway system.

Practically all states are beginning to realize the necessity for good roads in the farming sections to enable the farmer to transport his produce when market conditions are most favorable instead of when the roads are passable, and to alleviate the social isolation which used to be synonymous with living on a farm.

While main through highways are of course indispensable, lower cost hard surfaced roads reaching all farms (so-called farm-to-market roads), are equaly necessary to an efficient highway system.

"PEACOCK ALLEY" BEING SHOWN AT THE DAVIES

Mae Murray's long heralded "Peacock Alley" arrived at the Davies Theatre, San Francisco, Thursday. Somehow it seems almost impossible to think of "Peacock Alley" without also thinking of Mae Murray and it is pleasing to note that her first talking picture is one that brought her such fame on the stage and in the silent film. "Peacock Alley" as now offered by Tiffany-Stahl, in its modernized environment, gives Mae Murray full chance to exhibit her versatile ability to entertain. Not only is she a great emotional actress, but there are few who can dance in the daring, carefree manner that is her's. With the aid of natural colors, Mae Murray dances her own original version of the Tango and also gives her interpretation of a bull fight.

A blow-torch using powdered aluminum instead of gas has been developed at Syracuse University.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

Makes One Look Younger.

Men and women who used to be called Grandpa and Grandma are now setting the styles by darkening their gray hair at home.

For instance, J. A. McCrea, a well known Californian, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture in five minutes, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. Merely take a half-pint of water, add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

"These ingredients can be bought at any drug store for a trifling cost. Apply to the hair twice weekly with a comb. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

THE INVESTIGATORS

A widespread feeling akin to disgust is being engendered in the public mind by the investigation mania now afflicting the United States Senate. This does not mean that the public condones actions by groups or individuals which are against the general welfare, but some of the methods employed by the investigators are becoming tiresome.

Witnesses appearing before these inquisitorial committees are frequently subjected to browbeating, abuse and insinuations in an effort to furnish sensational material for press reports which has little if any bearing on the matter at issue. Many of these investigations are pervaded with an atmosphere of hypocrisy which is readily sensed by every fair-minded person.

The truth is that Senatorial investigations are generally inspired by political and selfish motives. Even in cases where an investigation might be necessary and proper, any possible good that could accrue to the public is often largely nullified by the manifest spirit of malice and unfairness which characterizes the procedure of the inquiring tribunal.

And when all is said and done, about the only tangible result of a Senatorial investigation is a nice, juicy expense bill which the taxpayers must settle.

Matches were first successfully made by machinery in 1840.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

A population of 200,000 is predicted by 1940 for Fresno city by members of the Fresno Realty Board.

Inauguration of a new air line service running on regular week-end schedule to Death Valley was announced recently at Los Angeles.

Because of lack of money in the state junior college fund, petition of Los Angeles County for formation of a junior college district was denied by the State Board of Equalization.

D. S. Rosa, operating under the name of Cambria Stage Line, applied to the Railroad Commission for express service and fares on his passenger service operating between the city of San Luis Obispo and the town of San Simeon.

The highway needs of Contra Costa County, is affected by joint highway districts, are to be reported to a state conference in Sacramento the latter part of January and in Los Angeles sometime in February.

Property of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company in Mayfield, now part of Palo Alto, is valued at $121,539, according to a ruling of the State Railroad Commission. Palo Alto wants to buy the Mayfield equipment of the utility company and the commission fixed the price.

Work on the new 22 inch natural gas transmission line of the Standard Oil Company through Contra Costa County and which will serve the Coast Counties' distributing system in that territory, was started with the arrival at Martinez of a crew of twenty-four men.

Butte County paid $3900 to maintain delinquent boys and girls in state reformatories for the six months ended November 30, according to Lucy Richards, auditor.

The plan by which the state will withdraw from the land colonies at Durham and Delhi is meeting with favor among Durham colonists, Lee W. Pray, chairman of the settlers' committee, said. Pray predicted a big majority will accept the plan, and that it probably will go into effect.

San Jose State College is now qualified to issue two new degrees, according to an announcement by President T. W. MacQuarrie. They are in librarianship and in school supervision and administration.

Articles of incorporation of the Western Empire Mines Company Ltd. were filed with the county clerk at San Andreas. The company will engage in mining in the Hodson district, Calaveras County. It has taken over the old Royal mine and several adjacent claims. Capitalization was placed at $5,000,000.

An extensive building campaign, including modern hotel and amusement facilities, is planned for one of California's oldest resorts, near St. Helena, Napa County, according to information revealed with the filing of articles of incorporation by White Sulphur Springs of California Ltd. Roy H. Mercier, president, says $200,000 will be spent on improvements.

Annual reapportionment of United States funds collected from the sale of timber in various counties was made by Comptroller Ray L. Riley. Alameda County was given $12,038, Los Angeles $9824, Fresno $41,646, Plumas $70,039 and Tuolumne $43,346. A grand total of $356,981 distributed among the counties represents 25 per cent of receipts of sale of federal forest lands during the past year.

According to the report of Vallejo City Auditor George Hildreth to the city council, the expenditures of the city of Vallejo from all funds for the six month period ending December 31, 1929, totaled $195,308.78. Appropriations for the entire year were $518,732.50, leaving an unexpended balance of $323,423.72 for the next six months. The report also stated the collections during the same period were $278,397.41.

Butte county sportsmen will have the added attractions of wild turkey hunting in the next few days. Austin Darby, vice president of the Feather River Rod and Gun Club, has undertaken to raise wild turkeys from eggs which he is hatching at his home at Oroville. Darby has four birds well on the way to full growth and by spring he hopes to have forty-five wild turkeys in his runways. The turkeys will be released in flocks of two dozen when grown. They will be released on preserves.

Of all district, county and state educational funds raised for the last year, 51.6 per cent was for elementary school purposes, it was announced by the State department of education. An analysis of the school tax dollar, exclusive of disbursements for the University of California and the State Teachers' College and special schools, also showed that 44.6 per cent was raised for high schools, 1.3 per cent for district junior colleges and 2.7 per cent for kindergartens.

The California Transit Company applied to the Railroad Commission for authority to purchase from Southern Pacific Motor Transport Company operative rights for the transportation of express of Railway Express Agency Inc.

Mayor Fred Heegler of Vallejo is formulating a plan whereby that city would handle its own compensation insurance for all employes instead of continuing with policies in the State Compensation Insurance Fund, and thereby save approximately $8000. The matter will be presented to the city council in the near future.

Plans are being prepared for the city of Burlingame for a one story fireproof library building to cost about $65,000. Bonds are to be voted in April.

Eight transpacific ships are scheduled to take cargo for Australia and the Orient at the Richmond municipal terminals in January. Several coastwise ships also will load in Richmond.

The Navy Yard Association of Mare Island recently acknowledged receipt from the Vallejo city council of a copy of the proposed lease agreement between the city of Vallejo and the Mare Island Ferry Company.

Rights of way have been obtained for construction of a levee on the western bank of the Feather River northeast of Biggs. The Feather River fills an old channel during period of extreme high water and Biggs and much of the surrounding country is flooded. In 1927 the Pacific highway for miles was under water.

Authorization to launch the 10,000 ton cruiser Chicago April 10 was received at Mare Island navy yard from the secretary of the navy. A Chicago resident is expected to christen the vessel, which is 600 feet long, and has a beam of sixty-five feet. The keel was laid September 10, 1928, and the completion date is March 13, 1931.

In preparation for its coming campaign of street improvements, which will be inaugurated as soon as the rainy season is over, the Salinas city council instructed the city clerk to call for bids immediately on several paving contracts. The bids will be opened February 20.

An upward trend of business activities is seen in the 1929 survey of postal receipts completed by Postmaster J. H. Whitaker at Anaheim. Postal receipts during 1929 totaled $56,545 as compared with $53,363 for 1928. Assurance that the year 1930 will see the $60,000 mark was expressed by Whitaker.

Contract for an important unit in the Golden State highway, the main artery of traffic between Los Angeles and Sacramento, was awarded by the Department of Public Works to the California Construction Company of San Francisco on its bid of $240,109. The new stretch, a distance of nine miles between Pixley and Tipton in Tulare County, will be graded and paved with asphalt concrete.

Chambers of commerce of the north coast counties were benig urged to appoint Olympiad committees to devise ways and means of taking advantage of the great influx of tourists expected in California in 1932, year of the Olympic games. Chester Merrill, Santa Rosa, regional manager of the North Coast Council, is to mail requests to all chamber secretaries, urging their early co-operation.

When citizens of Livermore heard that they were likely to lose Battery E, One Hundred and Forty-third Field Artillery of the California National Guard, they set to work and, as a result, Adjutant General R. E. Mittelstaedt announced the unit has been placed on "probation" until after the annual regular army inspection next April. The unit was reported below standard in drill and that difficulties had been encountered in finding the proper officer personnel.

Construction of 223 miles of national park approach roads in California at a cost of $7,455,000 is provided for in legislation pending before Congress. The California program includes expenditure of $3,640,000 for 104 miles of road leading to Yosemite Park, $2,625,000 for 75 miles leading to Lassen Park, and $595,000 each for 17 miles, leading to General Grant and Sequoia parks. The Lassen project calls for construction of forty miles of road from Manzanita Lake toward Burney, then ten miles from Lake to Vigla, fifteen miles from the northeast boundary of the park to Poison Lake, seven miles from the southeast boundary of the park to the Red Bluff-Susanville highway, and three miles from Mineral to the Forest highway. The Yosemite project calls for construction of forty miles from the Crane Flat entrance to Jacksonville, fifty miles from the Wanona-Coarse Gold road and fourteen miles to the Leevining Canyon road. The other California projects call for construction of seventeen miles of road from the Grant Park boundary to Dunlap, and seventeen miles from Sequoia to Grant Park. The rivers and harbors committee of the House of Representatives recommended construction of a breakwater in Monterey Bay at a cost of $600,000.

The United States Shipping Board has agreed to turn over one of its vessels, the Henry County, to the state of California for use as a nautical training ship. Representative Welch of California announced after a conference with T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the board. The California Legislature last session appropriated $115,000 for establishment of a natural training school. The Henry County is now at Norfolk and will be delivered to the California authorities at Vallejo. She is an oil burner about 300 feet in length.

Included in the $250,000 new building program of the Dominican College at San Rafael, exclusive girls' school, is a new chapel, which will cost $60,000. Work on Guzman Hall, new academic building, will start in February.

Major General David P. Barrows, commanding officer of the fortieth division, National Guard, made a surprise inspection of the three Stockton units of the 143rd Field Artillery recently. He expressed himself as satisfied with conditions, and paid a special compliment to the medical department under command of Dr. George H. Rohrbacher.

KITTY AND TOMMY

There are some cousins of the cat family known as the banded ocelot family, and they come from South America and Central America.

They had given themselves quite simple names, however, so it would not be hard for people to call them by name, and for the keeper to speak to them, using their names.

There was one named Tiger, one named Puss, Kitty, Lucifer, Mrs. Coal and Snow.

They were names which they had heard had been given to their cousins, the cats.

"It's so much nicer," said Tommy, "to be called by a good, friendly name.

"Somehow there is nothing at all friendly, nor even sociable about the family name of banded ocelot. But then cats are always called by special names, and not just called cats, so we should be allowed nice extra names anyhow.

"I'm really rather an interesting animal, when one comes to think of it," he continued.

"Who is coming to think of it?" asked Kitty.

"I mean when I come to think of it," said Tommy.

"You've been here all the time. What do you mean by saying you have come to think of it?

"From where have you come? From where? I repeat—from where?

"You're putting on airs and pretending you've been away for a journey when you've not moved from home at all."

"Don't get so excited, Kitty; you remind me of our other cousins.

"When a creature says he has come to think of a certain thing he means that he has just arrived at the point where he is thinking about it, that's all."

Have a Cat Nap.

"A lot of senseless words about nothing at all," said Kitty, snarling.

"Purr, my love, purr," said Tommy. "There is nothing to get excited about.

"Have a cat nap."

"What's that?" asked Kitty. She liked the sound of the word nap.

"It's a sort of sleep enjoyed by our honored cousins, the cats."

"Haven't we any ocelot naps?" asked Kitty.

"To be sure," said Tommy, "but it's much easier to say cat nap. It means a nice little snooze with one eye half open ready for anything that may happen—from a morsel of food or a bowl of milk to an adventure and a wild chase."

"I know about such naps," said Kitty, as she purred. "I've had many a one myself."

"I haven't told you why we were interesting," said Tommy.

"All right, tell me."

"We're half way between the tiger family and the cat family, and no other creatures are like us.

"We purr and me-ow like cats. We're wild like tigers sometimes.

"We're like the domestic cats and we're like the animals of the jungle!"

And all the banded ocelots who were listening purred as they agreed with Tommy, and said:

"Me-ow, what you say is true."

Proof

The salesman had urged his "best sellers" in vain. Finally he struck out desperately.

"How would you like a loose-leaf dictionary?" he asked.

"Got one," replied the prospect.

"What kind?"

"Webster."

"I didn't know there was a loose-leaf Webster."

"Well, you ought to see mine after my twins, eleven years old, have been using it for school work."—Chicago Daily News.

Too Low

Teacher of young Hebrew—Sammy, if you put $100 in the bank for a year at 2 per cent interest, how much money would you have at the end of the year?

No reply. Teacher repeated the question. No reply.

"Sammy, what is the matter with you? Don't you hear my question?"

"Yes, teacher, I heard, but I ain't interested in 2 per cent."

Bouquet for Dad

Teacher (looking over Teddy's homework)—I don't see how it's possible for a single person to make so many mistakes.

Teddy (proudly)—It isn't a single person, teacher. Father helped me.

NEW GOLF BALL IS AID TO DUFFER

Bigger, Lighter and Better for Average Player.

Most of the howling that you hear about the new standard golf ball comes from the golfers whom the new ball will assist to play better golf than they ever thought of playing before, if they can only forget they are using a new ball. It is bigger and lighter and better for the average golfer and the plain or 110-variety of duffer.

The experts and the champions are the ones who will have to do some calculating, and brush up on a few shots, and learn a bit more about play in the wind before their scores sink down to par, and below.

Briefly, the new standard ball, already on the market, but not to become official for us in U. S. G. A. championships until January 1, 1931, is 1.68 inches in diameter and 1.55 ounces in weight, where the present standard is 1.62 in both particulars.

Football fans should feel thankful for the break that came between Capt. John McEwan, coach, and the University of Oregon, according to C. M. Gibbs of the Baltimore Sun. It brought a new angle to light that few football fans suspected existed in present-day gridiron activities.

The reasons for McEwan's loss of favor at Oregon are not important. His explanation of the only trouble he ever had as coach is:

It will be remembered that he claimed the only difficulty he experienced was when he and the president of the university disagreed upon which substitute to send into the game at critical moments.

The idea of the president of a university sitting on the bench and arguing with the coach over the running of the team adds a touch of color to the fall pastime.

This assertion of McEwan's, if true, indicates that it may not be long before college presidents, urged on by the financial and other aspects, will be taking over more and more the duties of the coach.

Western league umpires may travel from city to city in automobiles next season. President Dale Gear will ask club owners to purchase automobiles for officials' use in an attempt to cut down league expenses.

The baseball fans of the Pacific coast are assured a real fight next summer because the league has put up $15,000 to fight for.

The season in 1930 will be split. If one club wins both the first half and the second half it will receive $7,500 to be divided among the players. The second place club will receive $3,500; third, $2,500, and the fourth place, $1,500.

If one club wins the first and another the second they'll fight it out for $10,000—the winner getting $6,000. The third place club would then receive $3,000 and the fourth place $2,000.

Orval Martin, captain of Purdue's track and cross-country teams, has a most unusual victory record in collegiate competition. Martin never has been defeated in a conference championship track meet, winning five championships in four meets. He holds the conference indoor records for both the mile and half-mile, and in addition won both the mile and the half-mile in the outdoor championships last spring.

National league managers are interested chiefly in the problem of preventing the Chicago Cubs from repeating their 1929 pennant victory.

Manager Joe McCarthy and owner William Wrigley have made a serious effort to strengthen any weak spots in the Cubs' lineup and have done more to improve their club, since the close of the 1929 season, than any rival owner has done to better his.

Purchase of Lynn Nelson and Malcolm Moss, leading pitchers of the American association, added efficiency to the Cubs' already strong pitching staff and the purchase of Lester Bell from Boston, is expected to fill satisfactorily the weakest position on the Cub team—third base.

Professional Golfers association has raised the dues to $50 a year, which will make available an annual income of $60,000. The association proposes to employ a business administrator, three district organizers and clerical help in order to build up the organization.

The University of Texas and the University of Missouri have agreed to a four-year series of football games beginning in 1931.

The first game would be played at Austin, Texas, October 3, 1931, and the second at Columbia, Mo., October 10, 1932.

The 1932 Olympic games are two years and more away but already there are indications that the world's sports show will play to the biggest crowds in its history and attract the greatest number of athletes.

When it was announced the Olympic games would go to Los Angeles other countries gloomily predicted the great distance would bar many from competing. But officials already have word that the entries will outnumber those in any previous meet. The crowds are assured, for California turns out for track and field more enthusiastically than does any other part of the world.

WHEN ENTERTAINING

There are so many dishes which may be prepared the day before, saving the time and nerves of the hostess that one should gather as many of such recipes together for time of need. Here are some suggestions:

Chicken Salad in Cracker Boxes. — Soak one teaspoonful of gelatin in two tablespoonfuls of water and dissolve in two tablespoonfuls of boiling water. Take twenty-four small square crackers and put four of them together in a box shape, open top and bottom. Set on lettuce lined plates and fill with chicken salad. Mix two cupfuls of finely cut chicken with an equal amount of fine celery, a few nuts and any salad dressing desired to moisten, using salt and cayenne to season. The gelatin is used to fasten the crackers together in the shape of boxes. The crackers are to be eaten with the salad.

Fruit Dessert.—To one-half pound of marshmallows cut fine add a can of shredded pineapple, with enough of the juice to moisten well; add to one pint of lemon gelatin and mold in small cups. Serve with whipped cream and chocolate wafers.

Jellied Tongue.—Take a tongue from the glass jar and cut into thin slices. Prepare a jelly by soaking one tablespoonful of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water and adding one cupful of boiling water in which has been dissolved a bouillon cube, salt and pepper to taste. Strain. Put the tongue into a shallow mold and when the jelly begins to thicken pour over the tongue. When ready to serve turn out on a platter and garnish with slices of sweet pickled cucumbers.

Pear Salad.—Drain a can of Bartlett pears, save juice and fill the centers with chopped celery mixed with mayonnaise and sprinkled with salted almonds. Make a french dressing with a bit of lemon juice, the pear juice and any good oil, beat well, add a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, salt and cayenne or paprika to taste. Arrange on lettuce.

Fruit Course.—Prepare casaba melon, removing the seeds and slicing in suitable portions for serving. Serve with quartered limes, sugar and powdered ginger.

Ways With Rabbit.

There are so many delicious and savory dishes that may be prepared from rabbit, wild or domesticated, and this is the season when they are most enjoyed.

Rabbit Pot Pie.—Cut three dressed rabbits into pieces for serving, flour them with well seasoned flour and fry in drippings until well browned. Fry one minced onion in one tablespoonful of butter, add the rabbit and two pints of boiling water, two slices of lemon, a little cayenne and more salt if needed. Cover closely and stew until tender. Prepare biscuits and place them on top of the meat, cover closely and cook twenty minutes. Serve the rabbit in the center of the platter with the biscuits around it.

Rabbit Fricassee. — Remove the meat from the bones of a rabbit, sear it in butter over a quick fire without browning. Cover with boiling water and let simmer until tender. Boil the stock down to a pint, add one tablespoonful of butter and flour blended together, one-half teaspoonful of celery salt, two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice, a teaspoonful of minced onion, salt and cayenne to taste. Add one cupful of hot cream and pour the sauce slowly over two well beaten eggs. Serve the meat in the center of the platter, pour the sauce around it and garnish with toast points and parsley.

Roast Rabbit With Chestnuts.—Clean and stuff a trussed rabbit with chestnuts. Use one cupful of the nuts, boiling them until tender, then mashing them to a paste, adding butter, a tablespoonful of cream, salt, pepper, nutmeg and lemon juice with three tablespoonfuls of bread crumbs. Mix and fill the rabbit. Roast until brown and tender, basting frequently.

Stewed and Larded Rabbit.—Wash and soak in salted water for several hours. Cut the rabbit into quarters and lard it with strips of firm salt pork, or bacon if preferred. Brown in a hot frying pan. Add two cupfuls of stock to the rabbit, a bunch of savory herbs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, pepper and salt and simmer until the meat is tender. Strain the gravy, thicken it and serve poured over the rabbit.

Rabbit Soup.—Skin, dress and wash the rabbit, cut it into serving-sized pieces, dust with a little flour. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter or sweet fat, add the rabbit and an onion cut into slices, fry a light brown. Stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour, add the liver of the rabbit and three and one-half pints of stock. Simmer until tender. Remove the large bones and serve with carrots and potatoes.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys If Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

"Lucile is the Happiest Girl"

So many mothers nowadays talk about giving their children fruit juices, as if this were a new discovery. As a matter of fact, for over fifty years, mothers have been accomplishing results far surpassing anything you can secure from home prepared fruit juices, by using pure, wholesome California Fig Syrup, which is prepared under the most exacting laboratory supervision from ripe California Figs, richest of all fruits in laxative and nourishing properties.

It's marvelous to see how bilious, weak, feverish, sallow, constipated, under-nourished children respond to its gentle influence; how their breath clears up, color flames in their cheeks, and they become sturdy, playful, energetic again. A Western mother, Mrs. H. J. Stoll, Valley P. O., Nebraska, says: "My little daughter, Roma Lucile, was constipated from babyhood. I became worried about her and decided to give her some California Fig Syrup. It stopped her constipation quick; and the way it improved her color and made her pick up made me realize how run-down she had been. She is so sturdy and well now, and always in such good humor that neighbors say she's the happiest girl in the West."

Like all good things, California Fig Syrup is imitated, but you can always get the genuine by looking for the name "California" on the carton.

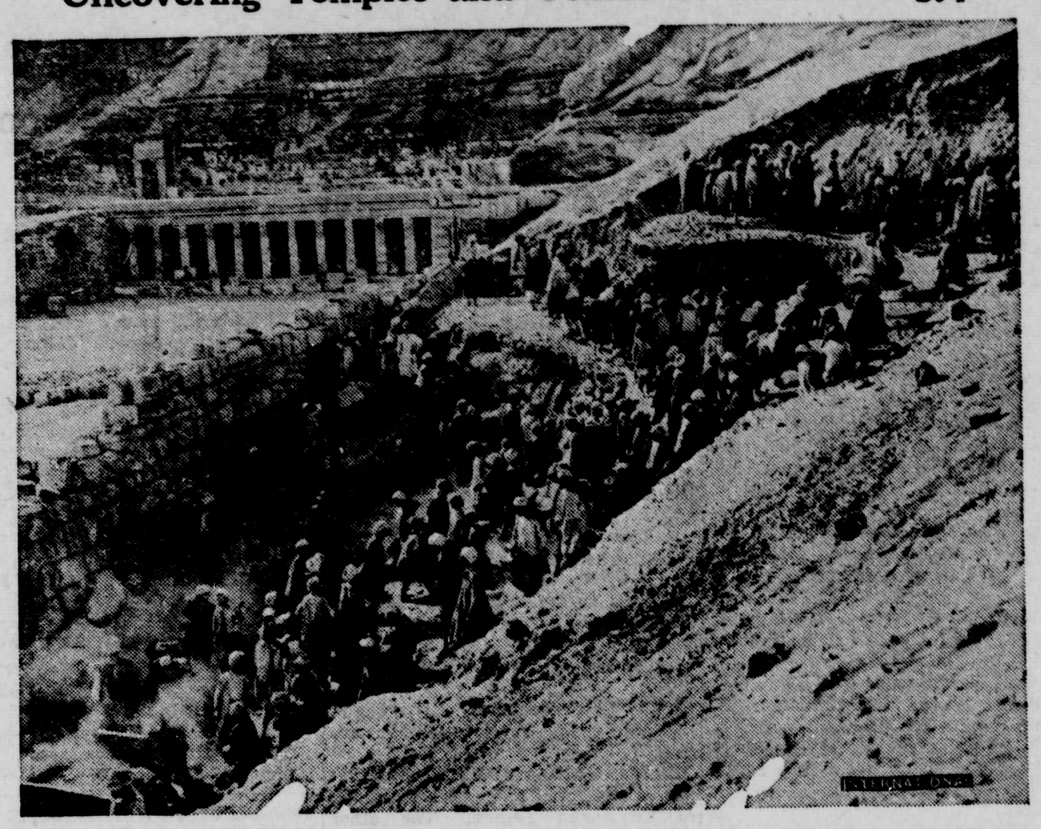
Uncovering Temples and Tombs of Ancient Egypt



Excavations, with the aid of native labor, in progress at the ancient temple of Deir El Bahri which has been uncovered by the Egyptian expedition from the Metropolitan Museum of Art under the direction of Herbert E. Winlock. Among the sensational ruins brought to light is the magnificent tomb of Queen Meryet-Amun, believed to be about 3,000 years old. Evidence was found that robbers had been at work nearly a thousand years ago, and made off with many of the priceless treasures.

Tells of Horrors on Devil's Island

Escaped Prisoner Relates Terrible Experience in Penal Colony.

San Francisco.—Literally resurrected from the dead through accomplishing the almost incredible feat of escaping from the French penal colony, Devil's island, the "Phantom Bandit," notorious highwayman, who terrorized France 25 years ago, was found in San Francisco recently and his story translated for the public by Dr. Glenn Hoover, professor of economics at Mills college.

Because of a price upon his head he is to be known as Pierre Dupres, admittedly an alias. Doctor Hoover did not hesitate to place the stamp of truth on the story as he unfolded a tale of detailed horrors of the land of living death, his home for seven years.

Devil's island is so known because of its discovery by French sailors, who saw a wild man on its shores, but who, on landing, could find no trace of human habitation.

Really Four Islands.

"Truly it must have been the devil himself," they said, and so the island was named.

Island is more or less a misnomer, as in reality there are four—Ile de Diable, where political prisoners are confined; Ile de St. Louis, the leper colony for prisoners, and Ile des Royale and St. Joseph, for anarchists and bandits.

"I lived on all four at various times," said Dupres.

From a petty thievery beginning Dupres told of his progress in crime to the point of introducing the motorcycle as an aid to both speed and freedom of movement. Thus he earned the name "Phantom Bandit."

From the life of an apache in the slums of Paris he went to Devil's island via the vicinity of the guillotine, which he escaped by executive clemency.

"It was for attempted murder of a policeman, for which I was to have gone to the guillotine," he said. "But then I explained my fame as a marksman would have made it as simple to have killed him as to have just put a bullet through his cap."

Dupres then told of the men of the island dying of fever and starvation, shackled by day and at night double shackled to the point where they could not move. Death, seemingly, is the only release from the shackles, which are unlocked to place the corpse in a wheelbarrow to be taken to the sea and cast to the sharks, which assemble in mass formation with the ringing of the funeral bell.

Finally Reaches U. S.

Dupres, who several times vainly attempted to escape, finally succeeded when [illegible] 130 sentenced for duty on the leper island a [illegible] company with a squad of others [illegible] in a native outrigger canoe.

Death or capture befell all save Dupres ere they reached the boundary of Dutch and English Guiana via "the graveyard of Frenchmen" a "hell hole" on the French Guiana coast, where their boat was wrecked.

After many hardships Dupres reached Philadelphia aboard ship from the Guianas and since then has toured the country as a mechanic.

"I have saved my money and want to see home again," he said.

"What did we do on Devil's island? For one thing we built a stone wall and then tore it down and then rebuilt it, on and on, forever."

To Dupres is given the distinction of being one of the few known prisoners to have escaped Devil's island.

In his own words: "They die fast and there is always room for 2,000 more each year."

War Scar to Stay

London.—The London county council has decided that the wartime damage caused by a bomb to the stone work of Cleopatra's Needle on the embankment will not be repaired.

Population of U. S. Set at 119,306,000

New York.—The population of the United States increased more than 14,000,000 in the ten year period ended July 1, 1928, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research.

The population in 1928 was estimated at 119,306,000. Of that total, the bureau found, 46,580,000 persons support both themselves and the rest of the population. The details of these findings, the bureau announces, fill a 500-page report to be issued within a few days.

CONVICTS WILL BE TAUGHT PROCEDURE TO GET PAROLES

Maryland Official Plans to Protect Prisoners From Graft of Shysters.

Baltimore, Md.—The adoption of a new system to facilitate the parole of prisoners from Maryland penal institutions is being planned by Ambrose J. Kennedy, parole commissioner.

It is his intention, he said, to institute a campaign to familiarize every inmate eligible for parole with the requirements of the law and the procedure undergone at the hearings.

A further attempt will be made, Mr. Kennedy said, to have officials of the institutions select some of the more worthy for parole, who, through lack of initiative or familiarity with the regulations, have failed to file applications.

The methods he intends to adopt, such as having the prisoners notified of their eligibility for parole at the expiration of a third of their sentence, aiding them in filling out parole applications and advising them on establishing contact with prospective employers, will not materially increase the number of paroles, Mr. Kennedy said.

By these methods, he said, many prisoners worthy of freedom under supervision, but hindered in attaining it by ignorance or fear of being turned down, will be brought to his attention and investigated.

Mr. Kennedy said his plans are aimed indirectly at the practice of individuals who solicit the patronage of prisoners and mulct them of their savings with promises of obtaining paroles for them.

In the past, Mr. Kennedy said, some prisoners have paid fees as high as $250 and all that was ever done in their cases was the filling of the parole application, which, had they known it, they could have filled out and forwarded to the commissioner themselves.

It is the duty of the commissioner to see that during the period of parole each person is kept under strict supervision and a close check of his activities maintained.

This supervision extends even to the amount of their monthly earnings and the manner in which they are spent.

Only 101, He Needs Job to Keep Going

Beaumont, Texas.—Because the boss lets him out of every new job he gets when his age leaks out, W. M. Kearnes complains that he is being driven to seek charity.

Kearnes is emphatic in his assertion that he is not old—only one hundred one.

"I was born on a ship crossing the Atlantic back in 1828, and all my life I've been living in Texas, in McLennan county, near Waco. But I've been in nearly every country and port in the world," Kearnes declared.

All children are subject to little upsets. They come at unexpected times. They seem twice as serious in the dead of night. But there's one form of comfort on which a mother can always rely; good old Castoria. This pure vegetable preparation can't harm the tiniest infant. Yet mild as it is, it soothes a restless, fretful baby like nothing else. Its quick relief soon sees the youngster comfortable once more, back to sleep. Even an attack of colic, or diarrhea, yields to the soothing influence of Castoria.

Keep Castoria in mind, and keep a bottle in the house—always. Give a few drops to any child whose tongue is coated, or whose breath is bad. Continue with Castoria until the child is grown! Every drugstore has Castoria; the genuine has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

If a scientist thinks his science overthrows religion, he doesn't care to discuss the matter.

How A College Athlete Keeps Himself Well

BOB DEMING of Colgate, claims that a sensible method of health has really made life a pleasure for him. Mr. Deming writes that at first he could not believe this simple thing was the cause of his buoyant spirits. Finally, however, he had to admit that it was Nujol which was keeping him well, besides giving him, as he says, "five times the vitality."

"Believe me," he says "having free and regular bodily elimination makes all the difference in the world to a diver as well as to any other athlete. I can't afford to be nervous, sluggish, or depressed while diving. It just isn't done! I would like to urge any one, whether they think they are in good health or not, to give Nujol a try-out. It certainly can't do any harm, and I'll bet it would make them feel a hundred per cent better. It's worth trying!"

Mr. Deming has just about told the whole story. He is right in believing that Nujol contains no drugs, no medicines of any kind. It is tasteless and colorless as pure water. It is simply harmless internal lubrication, which your body needs as much as any other machine. Regularly as clock work, Nujol cleans out of your body those poisons which we all have, and which make us low in our minds, tired, headachy, and below par.

Robert O. Deming
fancy diver on Colgate University Swimming Team.

The way for you to find out how much better Nujol will make you feel is to try it for a few days. You can get a bottle in a sealed package at any drug store. It costs only a few cents, but it makes you feel like a million dollars. Do you know how many thousands of people keep themselves well and happy just by using Nujol? Why shouldn't you feel well all the time? You can! Get yourself a bottle of Nujol today!

It depends on you whether each day is "the daily grind" or the merry-go-round.

Trouble doesn't improve the character of a silly man as it does that of a wise one.

Any COLD

That cold may lead to something serious, if neglected. The time to do something for it is now. Don't wait until it develops into bronchitis. Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin as soon as you feel a cold coming on. Or as soon as possible after it starts. Bayer Aspirin will head off or relieve the aching and feverish feeling—will stop the headache. And if your throat is affected, dissolve two or three tablets in a quarter-glassful of warm water, and gargle. This quickly soothes a sore throat and reduces inflammation and infection. Read proven directions for neuralgia, for rheumatism and other aches and pains. Genuine Bayer Aspirin is harmless to the heart.

Forethought

An Irishman lay dying when the odor of cooking assailed his nostrils. Summoning his weeping daughter to his bedside, he said:

"Nora, darlint, an' ain't it doughnuts that I smell?"

"Right ye are, father," the girl replied.

"And would ye mind askin' your mither if I can have one before I die?"

The daughter delivered the message to her mother in the kitchen and brought back this answer:

"Mither says ye can not have one of them doughnuts; they're for the wake."
